RELIGIOUS LIFE

The university motto “pro christo et humanitate” which is interpreted “for Christ and humanity” speaks to the broader assertion that religion and learning go hand-in-hand and character grows with knowledge. This gives indication that spiritual growth and development is a critical part of learning at Shaw University. The University is committed to its tradition as a Christian institution. It also promotes interaction with other faith groups and it respects diversity throughout the campus community.

The Dean of The Chapel is the key university official responsible for providing leadership to spiritual activities throughout the university. Additionally, he or she provides pastoral counseling, worship opportunities, Bible Study, visitation and supervision of student religious organizations. The Dean is the spiritual advisor to the university president and provides advice on all matters that serve to enhance spiritual development, increase esprit de corps and enhance the moral and ethical dimension throughout the campus community. The Dean also
